SB 614 - Use of municipality by fictitious business in printed advertisement as deceptive act under Consumer Protection Act.

Bob Nugent, Revisor of States, briefed the Committee on SB 614, stating that there are a series of Internet companies that advertise themselves as local merchants when, in fact, they are not local merchants and are miles away, and in some cases are out of state. SB 614 creates another specific deceptive act practice. The new provision is found on Page 2, at line 39 and prohibits the using in any printed advertisement the name of any municipality in the state in such manner as to suggest that such person's business is located in such municipality unless: the business is, in fact, located in the municipality, and that the complete street address of the business in which the business is conducted is printed in full.

Senator Greta H. Goodwin, testified SB 614 was drafted at her request due to the deceptive practice allowing national telemarketing companies to masquerade as local businesses by listing a business as a local city business with local telephone numbers. SB 614 is drafted from the model legislation used by the State of Connecticut. There are currently 13 states who have successfully passed legislation prohibiting the misrepresentation of a businesses's name and location. (Attachment 1)

Ms. Goodwin testified the deceptive practice of using the name of a municipality in the business name with a local telephone number is primarily within the florist industry. The practice consists of listing the name of a business in the white or yellow pages of a telephone book, without a local address but with a local telephone number. A person calls the local florist to place an order. The call is automatically forwarded to some place, usually in New Jersey, where the call is answered with a generic name, "flower shop", an order is placed, charging a service fee of $8.95-$9.95. The order is placed electronically back to a local florist. The local florist fills the order with flowers costing less than the original order as the service fee has been deducted together with a 25% handling fee. The consumer is unhappy with the florist because they did not get what they ordered, and the florist is completely unaware of what has occurred as they are filling the order as it has been placed. Ms. Goodwin submitted a NBC-TV Dateline transcript, aired February 1998, detailing the deceptive practice with an estimated loss of $2.5 million.

Wayne DeBey, Past President of the Kansas State Florists' Association, testified in support of SB 614, stating the deceptive practice of out-of-state floral order gatherers placement of local phone numbers in directories throughout the state should not be allowed. The Association believes the following practices should not be allowed: 1) company's that deceptively list their names in local phone directories to suggest a location in that city, and 2) attempts to withhold the company's actual physical location when asked by consumers. Mr. DeBey stated the Association is in favor of legislation that requires full disclosure of location in telephone directory advertising to prevent consumers from being misled. (Attachment 2)

Carol Hornback, Pittsburg, Kansas, testified in support of SB 614, stating she owns two floral retail stores and has been in business over 30 years. The consumer is deceived by doing business with an out-of-state florist and paying an extra service fee, when they believe they are doing business with a local florist. (Attachment 3)

Donna Homan, Winfield, Kansas, testified in support of SB 614, stating the deceptive trade practice has hurt retail florists in Kansas as well as in many other states. Ms. Homan stated there are 33 cities in Kansas that have deceptive listings of which the Florist's Association is aware. Telemarketers misrepresent their geographical location and also, often use the names of existing flower shops in a particular location which hurts the local florist and the entire floral industry. $3.15 million in sales taxes were collected by the floral industry in 1999 for the State of Kansas. There is no way to measure the volume of sales taxes lost as result of the deceptive practices used by the telemarketers who paid sales taxes in another state. Ms. Homan stated SB 614 allows consumers to be aware of what they are buying and who they are trading with. (Attachment 4)

Steve Rarrick, Deputy Attorney General, stated the Consumer Protection Division, had not received many complaints as a result of this deceptive practice, and further, if it was unlawful to use the name of a municipality the telemarketers would more than likely utilize the name of the county. Mr. Rarrick stated there would be a penalty of up to $5,000.

The Committee asked whether SB 614 would apply to any other type of business. Mr. Rarrick responded it would apply to any business using a municipalities' name.

The meeting adjourned at 9:00 a.m.

The next meeting is scheduled for February 22, 2000.

RE: Senate Bill 614
 DATED: February 21, 2000

Thank you Vice-Chairman Ranson and Committee Members for the opportunity to speak in support of Senate Bill 614.

When I was informed of the fictitious phone listings being used in Kansas, I started researching the issue of this technique being used which has targeted the Florists' industry. I was amazed at the information which I found.

A fictitious phone listing misrepresents a store's name and location in phone books. This deceptive - but legal - practice allows national telemarketing companies to masquerade as local businesses, by listing themselves as a local city business with local phone numbers.

Senate Bill 614 is drafted from the model legislation used by the State of Connecticut to curtail out of state telemarketers from deceptively listing a local phone number as a local "Florist" or "Flowers" business name, such as "Topeka Florist" or "Topeka Flowers," where such a business does not exist. There is never a business address listed with the telephone listing. The local phone numbers are call-forwarded to the company's out-of-state location, which I have found in each case to be in the state of New Jersey. Consumers who call these local numbers with the presumption they are contacting a local florist are actually call-remote forwarded to another state without their knowledge. Fictitious phone listings have become a high-profile issue for many retail florists across the nation. I called the number listed in my local telephone book for Winfield Florist and upon much inquiry found I was actually speaking to a telemarketing firm in New Jersey. My secretary, Betty, called the Topeka Florist/Flower listing last week and engaged in an extended conversation with the woman who answered and found the woman on the other end of the line was sitting in her living room in New Jersey and had no connection with a floral company. I have visited with the regional representative of my telephone provider and I was informed that these call forwarding numbers are being used throughout the state.

I have attached a transcript of NBC-TV Dateline, aired in February 1998, to my testimony. The first part of the transcript details the deplorable customer service which resulted from the telemarketing scheme. I call your attention to the last two paragraphs on Page 2.

The rest of this transcript is very interesting and on Page 5 substantiates the black eye this type of deception gives to the floral industry.

I have been given information that members of the Society of American Florists have made considerable progress in their fight for fair business practices through the power of political involvement. Thus, far, florists in the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Florida, Georgia, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Ohio, Virginia, Wisconsin, and Washington State have successfully lead to the passage of legislation prohibiting the misrepresentation of a business's name and location. More states are following in introducing legislation to ban this practice.

I believe for Kansas to allow the continued practice of using a deceptive and fictitious name to conduct business in our state is highly unethical. Any person using an assumed or fictitious name for the person's business should be required to include the complete street address of the location from which such person's business is actually being conducted, including the city or town and state. As legislators' addressing consumer protection laws, I believe you will agree any less information is clearly a misrepresentation to our consumers. The continuation of this call and switch practice is draining our local florists' income and, in addition, substantial tax revenue is being lost at the state level.

Again, I thank you for the opportunity to address the Committee. I urge your favorable consideration of this legislation. I would be happy to respond to any questions you might have at the appropriate time.

PROGRAM Dateline

Stone Phillips, co-host:

How much are you going to spend on flowers this Valentine's Day, or when Mother's Day rolls around, twenty dollars, fifty, a hundred? Well, it's the thought that counts. So you'll probably hear that the flowers were great no matter how much you spend. But how would you feel if you weren't doing business with the hometown florist you thought you'd called?

Tonight, chief consumer correspondent Lea Thompson has the latest developments since we first brought you this "Dateline" investigation.

Unidentified Woman #1: Here I come, boy. I'm a satisfied customer. Aren't they beautiful?

Lea Thompson reporting:

A lot of people go out of their way to use a local florist. They get personal service, choose exactly what they want, and don't have to pay the fees charged by national services, like FTD. That's why Jennifer Frazier's boss told her to buy directly from Alexandria Floral, his favorite local florist. She didn't have the florist's number, so she called directory information and started using a number she thought was Alexandria Floral. That is until one of those orders came to the office for an employee's birthday.

Jennifer Frazier (Customer): The roses that I ordered were wilted. They were brown around the edges.

Thompson: Her boss went in to complain to the owner of Alexandria Floral. But Nina Carroll says, she didn't know what he was talking about. (Visual of exterior of Alexandria Floral)

Nina Carroll (Owner of Alexandria Floral): When we received the complaints, we would go and look for the order and couldn't find the order.

Thompson: So who did deliver the flowers?

Sandy Blood (Florida Resident): Is that the one you want?

Thompson: Florida resident Sandy Blood also wanted to use a local florist when she had to buy flowers for a relative's funeral in a nearby community.

Blood: I was looking for someone, specifically, in the Seminole area, because that's where the service was going to be held.

Thompson: She also didn't want to pay a middleman. So she found this listing for florists in Seminole and ordered a flower arrangement to be delivered for the grave side service the next day.

When you called that number, was there any question in your mind that you were calling a local number?

Blood: It was a seven-digit local exchange. No--I--yes, I felt totally like I was calling, you know, Seminole Boulevard. I just knew I was speaking to somebody on Seminole Boulevard.

Thompson: Naturally, when Sandy arrived for her relative's funeral at this cemetery, she looked around for the flowers she had ordered. She was stunned to find, despite three conversations to make sure they'd be here on time, the flowers were nowhere to be found.

Blood: I was just so angry, because my flowers did not get to the service. They totally missed the entire service.

Thompson: Sandy Blood later found out from Pete Bengston, the owner of the shop she thought she called, that he had no record of her order. (Visual of exterior of Seminole Floral building)

Pete Bengston (Owner of Seminole Floral): And we went and checked our files, delivery tickets for that day, and we had no order going to that place.

Thompson: So who was actually delivering these flowers? Both Jennifer Frazier and Sandy Blood say they were positive they had called local florists in Virginia and Florida. Neither of them had any idea both calls had really ended up in New Jersey.

Malissa (Flower Shop Employee): Flower Shop, this is Malissa. How can I help you?

Thompson: These operators answer, Flower Shop, but you won't find any flowers for sale in this building. And these women are not florists, they are telemarketers. They work for a man named Tom Meola, an inventive florist turned big-time entrepreneur.

The entire phone operation happens in this room.

Tom Meola (Entrepreneur): Yes. The actual sale is made right here.

Thompson: So both women actually used a middleman, exactly what they were trying to avoid. And they also had to pay an extra eight dollars and ninety-five cent service fee. Lots of other customers attempting to reach local florists end up here, too. In fact, Tom Meola's operators take in an average of four hundred orders a day, twenty-four hundred sales a week.

Unidentified Woman #1: (Over telephone) So what did you have in mind? Like, maybe a springtime vase arrangement of flowers?

Thompson: The orders are filled by local florists, but ones Meola chooses. He makes his money by keeping twenty-five percent of the price of the flowers; that leaves the local florist with seventy-five percent.

The operation is so successful, Meola says he expects sales to hit five million dollars this year. Yet he still manages the business right here at home, in his son's old room. (Visual of Meola sitting in office at home)

Meola: Business has improved thirty percent--a minimum thirty percent each year for the past seven years.

Thompson: The key to the operation: something called remote call forwarding. All it takes is one call to the phone company to get it up and running in any town in America.

Meola: Technology melts borders. That's what this is all about, the use of technology.

Thompson: And with that technology, Meola can create the illusion he's all over the country. He says if you live in a town of over eight thousand people, he probably has listings in the Yellow and White pages of your phone book under local-sounding names. (Visual of phone book floral listings; stack of phone books)

Meola: We don't advertise that we have a flower shop. We advertise our vocation.

Thompson: Using local numbers and eight hundred lines, Meola is now doing business in forty-eight states. And every call made to those numbers is automatically routed to his operators in New Jersey.

Meola: We went to the phone company and said, whatever area you cover, we want to be florist of, florist in, X-town florist, and X-town flowers.

Thompson: So in a community like Bethesda, Maryland, his listings look like this: "Florist of Bethesda," "Florist in Bethesda," "Bethesda Flowers," and "Bethesda Flower Shop." As you can see, these listings have no address. You can't walk into any of these shops. They only exist in the phone book or directory information. (Visual of Meola's listings for shops in Bethesda, Maryland)

Thompson: What was your reaction when you realized all along the way, you were dealing with a florist in New Jersey?

Blood: It was so deceiving. You're not supposed to, you know, dial a seven-digit number, local exchange number, out of your yellow pages and get rolled over to New Jersey!

Thompson: And remember Pete Bengston, the man who owns Seminole Florist, the shop Sandy Blood thought she'd called? He says not only has he lost business to Meola's Florist of Seminole, but he gets the complaints and bad reputation when Meola's local florist doesn't do a good job. Tom Meola says he doesn't know Pete Bengston, and he says if Jennifer Frazier looked at her credit-card statements, she would see Meola's New Jersey address. As for Sandy Blood's order? Although she told us she called three times, Meola says her order was late because she gave confusing instructions.

Meola: We're competing fairly on a playing field that's open to anybody and everybody.

Thompson: Some people say you're tricking consumers.

Meola: We're not tricking people in the slightest. When you call me up and you ask for flowers to be delivered anywhere in this country, that's what we do for you.

Thompson: You call yourself "Alexandria," "Herndon," "Clearwater," whatever name...

Meola: Yes.

Thompson: ...but you never tell people that you're really in New Jersey. Why not?

Meola: We do tell people that we are in New Jersey, if they ask.

Thompson: If they ask. Well, we decided to ask.

(On telephone) Let me ask you one thing: what's your address?

We ordered flowers from Meola's listing, Florist of Clearwater.

(On telephone) You're at 92 Morristown Road in Clearwater? OK, thank you very much.

And I asked, are you in Clearwater? And the operator said, yes. She lied to me.

Meola: I doubt very much that she absolutely said, yes, I am located in Clearwater.

Thompson: We asked NBC affiliates in four cities--Washington, Minneapolis, Columbus and Sacramento--to order flowers from local Meola listings. (Visual of map of United States showing NBC affiliates KCRA, KARE, WCMH, WRC)

Unidentified Woman #2: (On telephone) I wanted to send a spring bouquet.

Thompson: Of the eight orders our affiliates made, Meola's operators never volunteered they were in New Jersey. And when specifically asked, where are you?, three times out of four, our affiliates were not told the truth.

Unidentified Woman #3: (On telephone) So where are you guys located?

Thompson: Although the arrangements looked fine, two of our eight orders did not arrive when promised. One missed the morning delivery, and the other was three days early. Meola says that was a computer glitch. He also states what he is doing is not illegal or unethical, and his booming nationwide operation is just a savvy way to do business in the '90s.

Meola: Our customers are so satisfied, they come back and buy again from us.

Thompson: And Meola is proud of the fact he soon will be able to give those customers an even more localized greeting. This new fifty thousand dollar system will actually be able to identify what shop the customer thinks they've called. So, instead of... (Visual fifty thousand dollar system)

Unidentified Woman #1: (On telephone) Flower Shop. How may I help you?

Thompson: ...the operators will be able to say:

Meola: Good morning. Thank you for calling our flower shop, Mrs. Smith, and you're calling East Chicago Florist.

Thompson: Even when your call has been routed all the way to New Jersey.

Thompson: If you told people that their phone calls were going to New Jersey, what do you think would happen to your business?

Meola: You know, that's an interesting question. I really don't know.

Thompson: Well, we can tell you this; after Dateline's report aired last spring, apparently hundreds of "Dateline" viewers called to tell Tom Meola what they thought of his New Jersey-based business.

Melissa: (On telephone) Flower Shop, may I help you?

Thompson: Meola says he received both positive and negative calls. But business, he says, is up thirty-five percent. This woman is one of the people who took some of those calls.

Judy Connelly (Former Meola Employee): A lot of people would just say, we saw you on "Dateline" last night, and why don't you get a real life? Get a real job! Where are you located?

Thompson: Judy Connelly, who once owned flower shops, was Meola's office manager at the time. She says she personally talked to about one hundred unhappy customers.

Connelly: So after a while, it got to the point where you just didn't even want to answer the phone.

Thompson: She says Dateline's report turned out to be a revelation for her.

Connelly: I think sometimes we just go through life without even thinking of what we're doing, and then you see it on TV; wakes you up real quick.

Thompson: So three months after our story, Connelly quit her job and opened her own competing business.

Unidentified Woman #4: (On telephone) Florist Search.

Thompson: Her new company, Florist Search, still acts as a middleman. But Connelly helps you find a florist in the city where you want the flowers delivered, and her service is free to her customers. It's the local florists who pay to be in her directory. And so far, she says four hundred have signed up.

Connelly: (On telephone) Mesa, Arizona?

Thompson: You call her service, get the number of a local florist, and then order the flowers yourself.

Connelly: I knew that there was a better way to order flowers in the United States today.

And I hope to bring the consumer back to the local flower shops.

Phillips: If you'd like to know more about ordering flowers by phone, you can check out Dateline's Web site. Our address is www.dateline.msnbc.com

Kansas State Florists' Association

February 21, 2000

My name is Wayne DeBey. I am a retail florist from Salina. My wife and I have owned The Flower Nook, 208 E Iron Ave, for 17 years. Today I stand in front of you representing the Kansas State Florists' Association.

As the past president (1999) of the association I am here to convey the Kansas State Florists' Associations support of Senate Bill 614 as it relates to limiting the deceptive practice of out-of-state floral order gatherers placement of local phone numbers in directories throughout the state.

My association recognizes the right of national companys to engage in commerce within the state but feel that the following practices should not be allowed:

- Companys that deceptively list their names in local phone directories to suggest a location in that city.
- Attempts to withhold the companys actual physical location when asked by consumers.

The association also feels that the excessive relay charges these companys use is detrimental to the local retail florists. Typically out-of -state order gathers charge $8.95-$9.95 service fees to return the order to a local florist for filling. This fee would never be requested had the order been directly placed with the local florist.

Out-of-state order gatherers, to our knowledge, do not collect local sales taxes.

Kansas State Florists' Association urges you to pass legislation to require full disclosure of location in telephone directory advertising to prevent consumers from being mislead.

Sincerely,

Wayne DeBey

STATE OF KANSAS

Madame Chairman and Committee Members: My name is Carol Hornback. I am the owner of two retail floral Shops: Hornback's Posey Shop and Hornback's Posey Shop II both in Pittsburg, Kansas.

As a florist who has had a business in the state of Kansas for over 30 years, I also represent the Florist Transworld Delivery Association District Board which encompasses about 250 Florists over the entire state of Kansas. Representing both myself and the FTD Board of Directors, I would like to speak in support of Senate Bill 614.

I feel that the consumer fraud issue should be of the utmost importance in consideration of this bill.

As a retail florist, I pride myself in honesty of representation of products and services of my business as do other Kansas State Florists. With the listings of fictitious florists in local phone directories without addresses, but with local phone numbers, the public is being deceived into believing they are calling their local florists, whether it be a longtime resident or a newcomer to the community. They are misled to believe that they are trading with that florist that is down the street to get the best and quickest service for the order that is their local order. Since the order goes to another state, it is then transmitted to a local shop. Also, this consumer is charged an extra service fee that would not normally be charged by the local shop.

I feel like the consumer is being fraudulently deceived into believing they have used the best method to send their order locally.

As a member of the Kansas State Florists Community, I urge your consideration in the support of Senate Bill 614.

Madame Chairman and members of the committee, I very much appreciate the opportunity to testify before you today on this important issue. My comments will focus on a deceptive trade practice which has hurt retail florists here in the state of Kansas as well as in many other states.

My name is Donna Homan and I own a floral and gift shop in Winfield Kansas. I am here on behalf of florists across the state to ask your help in stopping the practice of deceptive telephone listings. I would like to explain to you what is happening to each of us.

For example, if a customer here in Topeka wants to send flowers to his family in Winfield, he may call a local operator in Winfield. He may get a number belonging to a company listed as "Florist in Winfield". When the number is dialed, however, it is automatically forwarded to an out-of-state company. The person who answers the phone does so with a generic "flower shop", takes the order and then calls a florist in Winfield to fill the order. He then takes a substantial percentage (usually about 25%) of the flower order as well as a service charge which is generally $8.95. Most often the customer placing the order has no idea he is talking to someone on the East coast and is unaware that a true local florist would not charge the $8.95 fee. Let's consider another example. A man here in Topeka wants to send flowers to his girlfriend who also lives in Topeka. He opens the white pages and finds a listing for "Topeka Florist". When he calls the number listed he has no way of knowing that the call has in fact been answered in New Jersey. It has now become a long distance transaction that benefits, a least partially, that business in New Jersey.

This practice deceives the consumer and hurts the ability of small, retail florists to stay profitable and provide livelihoods for themselves and their families and their employees. Many florists are already experiencing many other challenges including finding help, meeting payroll, upgrading technology and staying profitable. Olathe is said to be one of the fastest growing cities in the state yet in the last six months three retail florists have closed their doors there.

Currently I have found 33 cities that have deceptive listings and there may be more. In most towns the listing appears four times in the white pages and often in the yellow pages, too. The listings include for example, "Florist in Winfield", "Florist of Winfield", "Winfield Florist", and "Winfield Flowers". This is even worse in some instances as the business name used in the deceptive listing is already the name of an existing business. Thus a legitimate retail florist is competing against a company with the same name that seems to be local but is in fact out of state. The cities I am aware of that have deceptive listings are:

Arkansas City
Atchison
Chanute
Derby
Dodge City
El Dorado
Emporia
Garden City
Great Bend
Hays
Hutchinson
Independence
Junction City
Kansas City
Lawrence
Leawood

Lenexa
Liberal
Manhattan
McPherson
Merriam
Newton
Olathe
Overland Park
Parsons
Pittsburg
Prairie Village
Salina
Shawnee Mission
Topeka
Wellington
Wichita
Winfield

You are being provided with copies of the listings for each of these cities from their local phone book, some from the yellow pages and some from the Feist directory.

Another interesting fact is that most of these deceptive shops appear on the internet phone listings. Most internet business listings give you an option to click on a map and written directions. When you select map for these stores an actual map of each city comes up. A star is placed in the very center of each map with the words "Florist of Winfield" for example. When you click on directions, there is no information. A sample of these internet listings and the maps of three selected towns are provided for you.

My store is a member of AFS which stands for American Floral Services. AFS is now the largest wire service with over 25,000 members. Our President, Mr. Tom Butler, has testified before several other legislatures regarding deceptive telephone listings. I would like to read excerpts from AFS's Policy Statement of Deceptive Telephone Listings. "AFS actively supports efforts of AFS Florists to seek legislation that prohibits deceptive telephone listings that misrepresent the geographical location of non-local providers of floral goods and services. AFS believes this practice deceives the consumer and causes potential quality problems when there are order questions. AFS strongly opposes any sort of deceptive trade practice. These geographical misrepresentations of telephone listings clearly fit in this arena. These telemarketers not only misrepresent their geographical location but also often use the names of existing flower shops in a particular locale which can only hurt the local florist and the entire floral industry".

The floral sales tax category (SIC 5992) generated 3.15 million in sales tax during 1999 for the State of Kansas. There is no way to measure the volume of calls being sent through these deceptive flower shop listings. However, each and every call hurts the local florist and is a missed source of sales tax for our state.

On behalf of florists all across Kansas I urge your support of Senate Bill #614. Your support of this legislation would allow consumers to be fully aware of what they are buying and who they are trading with. It would also give Kansas retailers a fair opportunity to compete, to remain profitable and to continue contributing to their local communities. Thank you for your time.

Donna,

State sales tax collections by type of business are tracked using the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) coding system. The SIC code for sales of flowers is 5992. This category includes establishments who are primarily engaged in the retail sale of cut flowers and growing plants. Therefore, sales of flowers that occur in grocery stores, department stores, garden centers, etc. would not be included in the sales tax collection data.

For fiscal year 1999 (July 98 through June 99), the state sales tax collections in SIC 5992 was $3.15 million. This would translate to taxable sales of $ 64.3 million. The fiscal year 1998 collection amount was $3.0 million. The collection data does not include city and county local sales tax collections.

If you have any questions or need additional information, please call.
