

I have a degree in Sociology and a minor in criminology, but I did not read any books until the age of 29. I was destined to be a statistic. Black male growing up in the inner-city with and athletic ability.

When I started with The Fundamental Learning Center (FLC) I was a mess. When I completed my course with FLC, I made a decision to go back to school. I have now completed my courses for my LPN and will be taking my state boards in January.

I remember many a times sitting in that chair (having an aha moment) at the FLC crying and thinking "Why didn't they just tell me that".
