

To Whom it may concern,

I apologize in advance,, my shift key is broken so there will not be capital letters where they should be. however I find this new proposed bill so disturbing I will not let a broken key stop me from saying what I have to say. my husband recently graduated at 57 years old from a program that you are preparing do eliminate. let me share something with you. he quit school in early 70s to become a Marine and serve his country. the US government did not find it important enough back then to finish his education. as life happens he returned, got married, had three children and worked manual labor as a mechanic until he was disabled. then due to a wonderful wonderful program he was able to take classes for 3 years online since he would NOT have been able to sit in a classroom to complete this. I cannot believe you would even consider taking any funds from an education budget that is already crumbs left over from your wasteful spending, but you are proposing to make Kansas known as the most uneducated state in the united states. shame on you!!!!
