The office of Risk Management should support itself off of the savings is produces.	The question of changing the basis for the assessment to written premium should be studied before its adopted.	Little support for raising the assessment therefore would need to be revenue neutral to pass.

Traditionally TPA's are more aggressive in	work through the close out of existing claims as well as to select a TPA. New claims during this time must be managed as well. It could be at two years before the state would begin to see	in 2009 and it was determined that there would not be sufficient cost savings to the State. This would result in lost opportunities for new attractions to come to	believes they can be revenue neutral in two years. Action at this time seems premature	The projected savings are pretty small amounts. There have been a few years where the Commission was revenue positive so perhaps a running 5 year average would yield a better picture.

It is recommended that legislation be studied	various incentive programs would lower the transparency and legislative oversight of these programs.	Secretary is new to the job and it's the general consensus that he needs time to determine the best course of action.	The estimated savings are questionable due to increased need to spend on marketing programs. If the programs are decoupled the Secretary does not feel that there would be any money coming back to SGF since the funds would be useable in more areas.
