Jenny,

I just read the article in LjWorld from yesterday. I am so sorry Coach is not doing well. My family will be praying for your family during this time.

I would love to support your proposal for license plates in your father's name to be produced to support the demobilizing disease of Alzheimers. I have had family members that have gone through this journey as well. There are no words to describe the altering state of the person we love so much.

As I have told you multiple times before your father means the world to me and I think I speak for the hundreds of men he coached. As a Coach he taught us all the life lesson of GEETUS and many other lessons. The recent article written about him tells the story of how that was achieved. He made us all a lot tougher. We had to!! I know we strive for excellence in our lives in whatever we are doing. We learned the importance of working within a team. It didn't matter what string we were. It was how everyone is as important as the next guy. The tenacity we all showed during those times allowed us to be successful then and I'm sure it continues today for many of his players in their everyday life. Not allowing yourself to be satisfied during the game and along the journey was also important. And if you did he had the understanding on how to redirect you in the right path. Then of course, if and when we were able to get to the end of our journey we are able to smile. He also emphasized the importance of smiling along that journey.

Sincerely,
Chris King
