SPEAKER

To whom this may concern,

My name is Katie Moore and I am a mom of two boys ages 3 and 13. Up until the last year my job was a registered medical assistant. I have worked in many family practice clinics over the last 10 years, and have given more vaccines to children and adults than I would like to admit.

When my youngest was born in 2016 he turned blue on the second day of his life in the hospital. The nurse had to perform back thrusts on him to get him breathing well again. This was only the start of our health problems. When my son was an infant, he could not go longer than two weeks without being sick with something. You name a childhood illness and my son has had it. He had multiple vomiting episodes, and febrile seizures on three different occasions, the last one lasting 17 minutes. Around two years old, there was a span of about six weeks where I was having to take him to the doctor every week and I just was not getting the answers I needed. He told me kids just get sick and I would have to take him out of daycare. My mom gut knew something more was going on here. I finally took him to a naturopath and she diagnosed him with food sensitivities to dairy, gluten, and eggs. We took him off of all of that and he was instantly better but not 100%. In the meantime he developed a disease called cyclic vomiting syndrome (which I would not wish upon anyone), and also a disease called Pans, which is where some type of infection accumulates in your brain and causes extreme neurological behaviors. He is seeing natural doctors and he is healing, thank God. Now, you may ask how I know these were caused from the vaccines, and the simple answer is research. I looked back at all of his medical records, and most illnesses coincided with his vaccines or very shortly after. I also have spoken to his new pediatrician who is western medicine and he advised me to never vaccinate him again as he is not a good candidate.

Once I realized what was going on I began seeing reactions at my job, that I never would have correlated to the vaccines in the past. We had a perfectly healthy two year old whose mom was scared of the vaccines but then decided to catch her up (due to doctor pressure) and 10 days later she was in the ER with new onset grand mal seizures. I never would have even looked to see if she had been vaccinated before but I just knew she had to have been. I follow stories from all over the world with the same outcomes, some ending in death. This is not a one size fits all issue and I am terrified my child would die if he ever got another one due to mandates. I feel so strongly about this that I quit my job and am going back to school.

I really urge you to look at the harm that can be done, and please please listen to mothers, we have no reason to lie.

Thank you so much for your time, and please feel free to reach out to me with any questions.

Sincerely,

Katie Moore
