Chairman Hilderbrand and Senate Public Health and Welfare Committee Members:

My name is Michelle Lazcano. I'm 30 and live in Mulvane, KS. I was born and raised here and grew up reading Little House on the Prairie and Babysitter's Club books. I have suspected for a long time that I have some form of vaccine injury from the schedule my parents followed when I was a child. I have difficulty comprehending and expressing ideas and emotions and social anxiety and difficulty in social situations. It is difficult to express in words what a lifetime of social ineptitude is like. It's not something I'd wish on my worst enemy. I was able to get through the lower grades by being a class clown. Middle and High school were the worst- I had mentally curled into a ball that I couldn't escape. As a child my mother thought I was autistic when I was little because I had a fixation on "bumps in my socks" caused by the seam that I couldn't stand feeling. There are many other ticks and impediments to living as a normal healthy person that has caused me to think of myself as a high-functioning autistic person. It hasn't gone away yet, just because I managed to live through high school. It currently affects my work and social life negatively.

My nephew was given a double dosage of vaccines unnecessarily when he was 2 after my sister asked the nurses/ techs questions about the vaccines. He had a fever that night that she almost took him to the hospital for and afterward was not as intelligent as before. I still miss his intelligence that he used to have when he was 1 year old--before being receiving the shots--he was much more aware and present, was much less klutzy, more dexterous and had better comprehension and expression.

Vaccines are ruining humanity, especially the ones developed using aborted fetal cells. How can we justify the ends by the means? If human life is so worth preserving, then we should not even consider this kind of treatment. It's comparable to an old witch eating children to stay young herself. I think that these vaccines are what Bill Gates said they are for- depopulation. He is banned from India and other countries for sterilizing their children with his vaccines- talk about eugenics. He supposedly is doing it to save the planet, but I think the planet needs to be saved from people like him.

There are much better ways to treat health problems in general than receiving a mystery cocktail shot that you're just hoping your body won't adversely react to. I know that even without visiting a doctor for the past several years I am healthier than I used to be as a kid when my mom would take me to the doctors religiously and I'd have strep throat all the time. About a year ago I felt myself getting an aggressive cold and applied many natural remedies all at once and smashed it before it took hold. I no longer have to worry about eating gluten or sugar once in a while because after eating healthy in general I don't fall into a sugar coma like I used to. I'm getting some parts of my mental ability back now, too, proving to myself that even something as delicate as the brain can be healed from organic mercury and whatever else was in the shots I got.

People who accept these blindly just don't know what they are doing. They have no idea the firestorm that is being brought down on everyone's heads by crippling society and since everyone is doing it nobody notices their health being any different from their neighbors'. By charging forward in this way we are literally pushing humanity off of a cliff. Where is the saying "If all your friends jumped off a bridge..." ? Why is it now cool to just go with the flow? Where in the world is the America I was raised to admire and love, the best country in the world? How is it that we have caved so completely to pressure from forces we all know don't have our best interests in mind? Like my brain, I believe that this country can heal from seemingly permanent damage. Like my nephew's brain, I watch every day for signs of hope. God can change everything if only we do our part- like the servants who filled up the pots with water and witnessed Jesus' first public miracle.
